SELF-REFLECTION RESOURCES

Resources to support students self-discovery

Student Wellbeing Services at Allard Law focuses on meeting students where they are and providing support to improve their overall wellbeing. This is done through brief solution-focused individual counselling, wellbeing presentations, events here at Allard, and connection to external resources. Both big or small personal and academic challenges are welcomed and the Student Wellbeing Counsellor looks forward to your connection.

Leading a healthy and balanced lifestyle as a student is beneficial personally and professionally. Some of the positive academic improvements are: better cognitive functioning, enhancing test performance, development of strong study habits, and long-term academic and career success.

This resource was created by Registered Clinical Counsellor; Andrea Falco, and Student Wellbeing Employees; Mustafa Said and Sarah MacDonald. It can freely be used and shared as long as authors are credited and it is not sold. Copyright 2023.

COUNSELLING AT ALLARD

Andrea Falco, M.Ed, RCC

Student Wellbeing Counsellor

✉ wellbeing@allard.ubc.ca

<https://calendly.com/allardwellbeing/>

Law students can access counselling services with UBC Counselling Services either onsite at Allard Hall with the in-house Student Wellbeing Counsellor at Allard or with the central counsellors at Brock Hall. The in-house Student Wellbeing Counsellor allows for easier access to counselling and wellbeing programming that is designed to accommodate specific law student wellbeing needs. Sessions are available in-person or virtually to meet student needs.

Confidentiality

- Counselling is confidential. The Allard School of Law will not know you have attended counselling and counselling notes are not included on your academic record.
- Limits to confidentiality exist if there is imminent, life threatening risk to yourself or others, if someone under the age of 19 is in need of protection, or if you are involved in any legal proceedings and we are required by law to release your records.

Support at Allard

- Drop in counselling: You may come down to the Student Wellbeing Office (Allard Hall Room 147b). Counselling is available when the door is open. Drop-in and emergency appointments are also available at Brock Hall (Room 1040).
- Single session counselling: Research shows significant reduction of distress and problem severity after one session. This model can fit with your busy schedule, and provide strategies to activate change and get you back on track.
- Short-term counselling: Goal-focused counselling support. Recommendations to community referrals for long-term support and mental health resources will be provided as needed.
- After-hours counselling: Here2talk provides free, 24/7, confidential counselling services to domestic and international students registered in a B.C. post-secondary institution. Available 24/7 via app, phone and web. 1-877-857-3397 | Outside North America 1-604-642-5212.

LAWYER WELLBEING MENTORS

Legal professionals struggle with mental health and wellbeing challenges. Law students are aware of these challenges and worry about the impact of mental health on their studies and future careers.

The Lawyer Wellbeing Mentors program aims to combat the stigma associated with mental health through positive, accepting conversation and normalization with trusted professionals. Our Lawyer Mentors have had their own journey navigating their mental health and wellbeing challenges, and are happy to match with a student to share their experience.

The Allard Mental Health Toolkit

An ongoing resource designed for students at Allard to reduce stigma, increase education and highlights tools for common mental health challenges in the legal field. While the UBC specific resources may not be available post graduation, there are other community resources that graduates are encouraged to explore. Each mental health challenge comes with self-explore resources to read, watch and practice into your life as a lawyer.

HOW TO USE THIS TOOLKIT

Challenges with our mental health exist on a continuum, ranging from feeling content to distress. Seeking external resources – such as online resources, mental health professionals, support groups, and helplines – is crucial for promoting well-being and managing mental health challenges.

The Toolkit provides specialized knowledge and resources tailored to common mental health concerns in the legal field. It is our hope this resource helps to educate and combat the stigma around mental health.

Seeking help allows individuals to navigate the mental health continuum and work towards improved well-being. It is a sign of self-care and strength.

why is wellbeing important?

Research on lawyer and law student wellbeing has expanded over the years and studies show members of the legal profession struggle with their wellbeing more so than the majority of other professionals. Studies also highlight that these challenges can begin in law school.

The American Bar Association highlights 7 areas of wellbeing to improve personal and professional functioning as a lawyer and law student. The Institute for Well-Being in Law brings organizations together annually to learn and practice strategies to improve the 7 dimensions of wellbeing in the legal profession. At Allard, we believe that it is fundamental to start these discussions now and explore tools that students will continue to practice in years to come. The 7 dimensions are a core component of wellbeing programming and one on one sessions that happen at Allard.

Studies on brain health show us that the better our wellbeing, the easier it is to be in the correct mind space for optimal academic functioning and living a meaningful life. Improved wellbeing has clinically significant positive outcomes in relationships, self-esteem, resilience, and self-regulation, etc.

Allard School of Law is committed to providing education and support in each area of wellbeing.

STUDENT VOICE ON WELLBEING

Wellbeing to me means prioritizing my mental and physical health, even amid the hustle of school life. It involves carving out time for self-care, whether through meditation, exercise, or engaging in hobbies that bring joy. Nurturing my well-being enables me to cope better with academic demands and leads to a more fulfilling and balanced life!

- Mustafa Said, 2L

Wellbeing to me is about finding balance between my competing identities as a law student and a human. Without taking care of the human side, I'm not setting myself up to meet my goals and have a fulfilling law school experience. Planning ahead has been key to establishing that balance.

- Sarah Hlady MacDonald, 3L

Wellbeing is a practice with many dimensions, from physical to mental to social, and more. I try to work on each of these dimensions everyday, though the process isn't always linear. Practicing wellbeing also isn't always comfortable. Some practices that I know are important to my wellbeing can sometimes be uncomfortable, like setting boundaries. Furthermore, wellbeing to me is inherently communal: a support network goes a long way!

- Sina Ali, 2L

Wellbeing is a reflective process of checking in with my feelings and adapting accordingly. Taking the minute to check in and know your bounds, and being cognizant of how you're feeling or how you'll feel later are important to protect your wellbeing. Adapting my behavior in the moment to match or improve my feelings has helped me be more productive, take more breaks, get some space from stressors, and makes me more energized and enjoyable to be around during social situations!

- Tristan Kimball, 2L

It is important to me that when parts of my life become all-consuming, like law school has a tendency to be, that I step back and make sure I connect with other parts of my life that bring me back to a sense of self. This might mean going for a run, starting a new knitting project or having a movie night with my family. Neglecting other aspects of who I am is the fastest way for me to feel lost and overwhelmed.

- Julia Brewster 2L

Wellbeing represents a holistic approach to health and happiness. Socially, I enjoy forming and maintaining meaningful relationships that allow me to share experiences, offer support, and feel a sense of belonging and connectedness. Finding harmony between social, emotional and physical wellbeing creates a life that feels robust and purposeful.

- Eric Cislak, 3L

CHECK IN – HOW ARE YOU THINKING?

Cognitive Behaviour Therapy looks at how our thoughts, feelings and actions are all connected. With the idea that if we acknowledge an unhelpful thought and try to change it, we can hopefully reframe our feelings and actions to take us closer to the goal or life we want to be living.

Here are 8 unhelpful thinking habits with law student examples:

ALL-OR-NOTHING THINKING

Black-and-White thinking-> seeing things in extremes with no shades of gray.

EXAMPLE: It's not a complete success, so it's a failure. It's not fantastic, so it's awful.

"SHOULD" STATEMENTS

Thoughts about what you or others "should" do, "ought" to do, or "must" do. When we and others don't live up to these rigid standards, we feel disappointed or angry.

EXAMPLE: I must have a job lined up by next year or I'm a failure.

OVERGENERAL-IZING

If any part of it is bad, it's all bad and probably will always be bad.

EXAMPLE: You receive some critical feedback or a bad mark, and you think you aren't cut out to be a lawyer

PERSONALIZING

Everything has to do with you -> taking everything personally and blaming yourself even when there's no logical reason for believing this.

EXAMPLE: It's all my fault that we lost that motion.

DISCOUNTING THE POSITIVE

Discounting or ignoring good things and dampening positive emotions.

EXAMPLE: You receive a compliment and discount it as someone trying to manipulate you or just be nice.

FORTUNE TELLING & MIND READING

With little evidence, feeling certain that you know what will happen or what others are thinking - and it's bad.

EXAMPLE: You think that a classmate or coworker is mad at you based solely on a facial expression.

BELIEVING EVERYTHING YOU THINK

Accepting your emotions or mental chatter as fact: "I feel it or think it, so it must be true"

EXAMPLE: You feel jittery and are bombarded by mental chatter that you're a bad speaker and will screw up an upcoming presentation. Just because you feel/think it doesn't make it true.

MAGNIFY OR MINIMIZE

Exaggerate or minimize the meaning, importance, or likelihood of things.

EXAMPLE: You're good at what you do but, after one mistake, believe you're terrible at what you do. Or, you receive a glowing compliment about your work and continue to believe that you're mediocre at what you do.

ANXIETY

Anxiety is normal, adaptive, and does not last forever.

Everyone experiences anxiety at some point as it is our body's nervous system response to a perceived threat. It stimulates our fight-flight-freeze response to motivate us into action. It becomes an uncomfortable body sensation when the perceived threat is not actually dangerous. For example, going for a job interview can make your heart race or feel on edge. This would trigger possible responses of not being able to think clearly (freeze), you may snap at people closest to you (fight), or you may avoid the interview all together (flight).

Many people avoid doing things that cause fear and uncertainty. An Anxiety Disorder is when the symptoms fire in response to no real threat and happen for prolonged periods of time. Symptoms of anxiety include excessive worry, irritability, being easily fatigued, sweating, muscle tension, chest and stomach pains, unhelpful thinking, avoiding tasks, poor concentration, and many more.

96% of law students experience significant stress - a higher percentage compared to any other professional degree. (The Path to Lawyer Well-Being, 2017). 42% of law students believe they needed mental health support and only half of them accessed support during law school. (lawyerwellbeing.net, 2016).

MAJOR TYPES OF ANXIETY DISORDERS

Generalized Anxiety Disorder (GAD)

Extreme level of anxiety with no direct threat

Panic Disorder

Frequent panic attacks which are an exaggerated physical reaction to fear

Social Anxiety Disorder

Extreme fear or dread of social situations

Health Anxiety

Frequent worries of being unwell or becoming ill

Separation Anxiety

Distress from separation of a close attachment figure

Phobias + Agoraphobia

Extreme fear for a situation or certain object

Obsessive Compulsive Disorder

Having a series of 'obsessions' and/ or 'compulsions'

Body Dysmorphic Disorder

Obsessions and compulsions related to appearance

Perinatal Anxiety

Anxiety in a mom that shows up at the beginning of pregnancy to one years old

Post-Traumatic Stress Disorder

Anxiety that develops after going through a traumatic event

DEPRESSION

Depression is a mood disorder characterized by persistent feelings of sadness, a loss of interest or pleasure in daily activities.

Symptoms of depression can manifest in law students through persistent feelings of sadness and a loss of interest in their studies, exacerbated by the competitive and high-pressure environment of the legal field. Law students may also experience changes in appetite or sleep patterns, difficulties with concentration, feelings of worthlessness or guilt, and a lack of energy.

These symptoms impact emotional well-being, relationships, and functioning.

40% of law students are depressed upon graduation [8-9% prior to entering, 26% after one semester, 34% after two semesters]
(DaveNeeFoundation, 2013)

Recognizing and addressing depression in law students is crucial to support their mental health and academic success in this challenging educational journey.

CARING FOR A FRIEND IN DISTRESS

1	IDENTIFY WARNING SIGNS: These can be behaviours such as missing class, deadlines, unusual behaviour (ex. withdrawing when they are usually social), changes in appearance, grooming, and manner of speech.
2	CHECK-IN: Talking to someone in distress lessens stigma and increases the chances that they'll reach out for help. <ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>• Mention specific behaviours you have observed: "you seem less chatty than usual, what's going on?"</li> <li>• If they are open to talking, listen without interrupting and validate what they are saying: "that sounds really tough"</li> <li>• Ask further questions "when you don't see the point in waking up in the morning, does that mean that you're having thoughts of suicide?"</li> <li>• If they don't want to talk, tell them you care about them and that you're concerned with the changes in their behaviour. Encourage them to reach out when they are ready to talk.</li> </ul>
3	CONNECT THEM WITH SUPPORTS: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>• Offer your support: "how can I support you through this?"</li> <li>• Tell them about counselling supports accessible to them.</li> <li>• Text them or write down supports so they can access them. (eg. Allard Counsellor, UBC Counselling Services, UBC SAP (24/7 support), Vancouver Crisis Line).</li> </ul>
4	PRACTICE SELF-CARE: Connect with supports to debrief and look after yourself. Having difficult conversations can take a toll on us and we are not responsible for anyone's feelings and actions.

11% of students reported thoughts of suicide in law school.
33% of law students reported thoughts of suicide in their lifetime.
('It is Okay to Not Be Okay', The 2021 Survey of Law Student Well-Being, 2022)

Remember: help is always available.

SUBSTANCE USE

Substance use progresses on a continuum and is normal to use on occasion. Persistent and detrimental substance use that impacts physical and mental wellbeing can signify the development of a Substance Use Disorder. Using substances often has the motives to feel good, to self-medicate for another disorder, to perform better, or to explore new experiences, feelings or insights. Symptoms that may be present in law students include increase in tolerance, persistent cravings, neglecting responsibilities, engaging in risky behaviours, and continued use despite negative consequences.

27% of law students were at risk for alcoholism. 33% of students report binge drinking at least once in the prior two weeks and 16% at least twice. ('It is Okay to Not Be Okay', The 2021 Survey of Law Student Well-Being, 2022)

DISORDERED EATING

Disordered eating involves an extreme range of behaviours and attitudes towards food and body image. It is important to understand that occasional concerns about food and body image are common, and they do not necessarily indicate disordered eating. If concerns persist and intensify, leading to prolonged periods of disruptive eating patterns, an intense need for control, and negative emotional states, it may indicate an eating disorder.

Disordered eating exists on a spectrum. In severe cases it manifest as an eating disorder, such as anorexia nervosa, bulimia nervosa, or binge eating disorder. Symptoms of disordered eating can include excessive exercise, body dissatisfaction, distorted body image, feelings of guilt or shame related to eating, and changes in weight.

NEURODIVERSITY

Attention Deficit Hyperactivity Disorder

Symptoms of inattention and/or hyperactivity-impulsivity that interferes with daily functioning in two or more settings (eg. home and school). Challenges with executive functions (eg. working memory, time management, organization, task initiation, impulse control and emotion regulation)

Autism Spectrum Disorder (ASD)

Diagnosed on a spectrum of mild to severe. ASD looks different from person to person and may be harder to diagnosis in adults. Possible challenges with emotion regulation, social connection and understanding social cues, sensitivity to sensory input from their environment, and difficulty with flexibility and perspective taking.

Gifted or Twice Exceptional

Heightened intellectual ability (IQ above 130) and capacity to see complex relationships in the world. Someone with a gifted diagnosis can have exceptional abilities in one area and significant challenges in another area. When the challenge is a learning disability it is termed twice exceptional.

IBPOC

Individuals identifying as Indigenous, Black or a person of colour. They can face increased levels of stress across their lifespan due to systemic racism, bias, microaggressions, and intergenerational trauma.

In 2019, the Law Society of BC studied diversity within the legal profession. 16.15% of respondents identified as a visible minority, 3.52% identified as LGBTQ2+, 2.71% identified as Indigenous, and 23.6% decided not to identify themselves in the survey.

(Law Society of British Columbia, 2019)

Allard's dedication to diversity and inclusion is not only shown through the Indigenous Legal Studies Program and their wide range of student lead clubs such as the BIPOC Student Alliance, the Muslim Students Association, the Black Law Students' Association, the Indigenous Law Students' Association, and the South Asian Law Students' Association.

EXPERIENCING VICARIOUS TRAUMA

Vicarious trauma is a normal response to supporting someone who has experienced trauma. Ongoing exposure to hearing, seeing, and learning about these indirect experiences can have an impact.

Possible symptoms of vicarious trauma:

Difficulty with sleeping, feelings of helplessness, flashbacks, re-experiencing the situations, irritability, doubting your own abilities, difficulty with concentration and retaining information, feeling a sense of numbness when interacting with clients, increasing need to use sick days, increase of unhelpful coping mechanisms, feelings of being on alert, and a change in the core beliefs of the working professional.

Vicarious trauma studies show high levels of distress, high symptoms of depression and anxiety, and negative cognitive beliefs in safety and intimacy in Criminal and Family Lawyers.

IDENTIFYING BOUNDARIES & PROTECTING YOU

Setting boundaries and developing a self-care practice is important for mental health & wellbeing. It is especially important when discussing a profession with high emotional and physical demands such as becoming and being a lawyer. Identifying boundaries is recognizing the need to set and enforce limits, protect your self-esteem, maintain self-respect, and enjoy healthy relationships.

It is important to acknowledge the 8 areas where you can set healthy boundaries:

Activity area to acknowledge your limits and create your own healthy boundaries:

ACTIVITY SHEETS

"Suffering in Silence: The Survey of Law Student Well-Being and the Reluctance of Law Students to Seek Help for Substance use and Mental Health Concerns" surveyed 3300 law students from 15 different law schools from 2014-2016. 42% of students responded that they believed they needed support for emotional and mental health challenges, but only half of them accessed counselling. The hope at Allard is that students and staff can normalize and encourage accessing resources and support to break down the stigma associated with accessing mental health support in law.

The Toolkit and activity sheets are meant to provide more knowledge and supplement mental health support. It is not meant to be a replacement when therapeutic support is needed.

UNDERSTANDING YOUR WINDOW OF TOLERANCE

HYPERAROUSAL

Feeling overwhelmed, angry, and anxious with possible panic attacks.

Initial response might be to fight or run away, which may not be possible – sensations take over.

Ways to shift from a fight or flight state:

- Pause and engage grounding and soothing exercises
- Recognize the aroused state that you are in
- Increase awareness of thoughts and body sensations

OPTIMAL / LEARNING ZONE

Feeling present, calm, and safe.

Uncomfortable feelings may be present but you are feeling in control.

Ways to expand your capacity:

- Mindfulness
- Grounding exercises
- Maintaining a routine/ schedule

Ways to shrink your capacity:

- Stress & Anxiety
- Neglecting basic needs
- Unrealistic expectations

HYPOAROUSAL

Feeling disconnected and zoned out, or feeling as though you are numb or frozen as you navigate day to day events with limited to no energy.

Ways to shift from a frozen state:

- Notice your body sensations
- Engage in physical movement and stimulate your senses
- Reach out and connect with others

COPE WITH BIG FEELINGS

1	DEEP BREATHS: Taking a few deep breaths can help to pause and clear mental space to recognize my feelings.
2	IDENTIFY THE EMOTION: Taking a few minutes to tune into body and mind sensations. Using the Feelings Wheel to spot and label the emotion that I am currently feeling. Important reminder: you can be feeling more than one feeling at a time and sometimes they can be conflicting feelings: "I am happy-sad today"
3	ACKNOWLEDGE THE EMOTION: Take time to observe the thoughts and emotions without judgement. Provide yourself with validation and self-compassion that it is okay to feel this way. Important reminder: all emotions have a purpose.
4	REFLECT: I can notice that my thoughts, feelings and behaviours are all connected. I notice which thoughts are helpful and challenge the ones that are unhelpful. Questions for challenging thoughts might be: <ul style="list-style-type: none"><li>• Am I falling into a thought trap?</li><li>• What evidence do I have that this thought is true?</li><li>• Have I confused a thought with a fact?</li><li>• What would I tell a friend if they had the same thought?</li><li>• How many times has _____ happened before?</li><li>• What is the worst that could happen?</li><li>• If it did happen, what could I do to cope with or handle it?</li></ul>
5	COPING: Taking time to challenge our thoughts and view the emotion from a different perspective can be a great coping strategy. Try using other coping strategies that are healthy and not self-destructive. This can be a skill that you already engage in regularly or a new coping strategy that you build up to finding soothing.

WAYS TO COPE

At Allard, we put an emphasis in our monthly programming on strategies to implement to support your 7 areas of wellbeing. There are pages in the resource section of the Toolkit that are dedicated to checking in with yourself and creating goals for these 7 areas. This can be a helpful tool in preventing burnout and widening your window of tolerance. In other situations, you may find yourself needing to cope with an event, emotions that overwhelm you, or unhelpful thoughts that seem to be on replay in your mind. Below are 6 different areas where we can explore coping tools.

EMOTIONAL AWARENESS

Strategies for identifying and expressing feelings. [Eg. using the Feelings Wheel, journal prompts, using art supplies, therapy... etc.]

MY STRATEGY IS:

SELF-SOOTHING

Finding ways to comfort yourself using your five senses. [Eg. discovering things that bring you joy through touch, hear, see, taste and smell]

MY STRATEGY IS:

DISTRACTION

Things that you can do to take your mind off of a challenge for some time. [Eg. reading, puzzles, knitting, music, movies, sudoku, calling a friend... etc.]

MY STRATEGY IS:

OPPOSITE ACTION

Trying something opposite to the way you are feeling to change the emotion and delay impulse to react negatively. [Eg. watch a funny movie when sad]

MY STRATEGY IS:

GROUNDING

Strategies to center yourself in the present moment. [Eg. yoga, lions breath, lengthening your exhales, meditation recording, mindful eating activity]

MY STRATEGY IS:

CRISIS PLANNING

Building a plan that identifies your triggers, things you can try to do to ride out the wave of intense emotions and people you can call for extra support.

MY STRATEGY IS:

REDUCE STRESS BY CHANGING YOUR THINKING

The Allard Hall Mental Health Toolkit explains common unhelpful thinking traps, the tools to identify what emotion someone might be feeling, and how to cope with it. This activity allows students to identify a situation or stressor they are currently experiencing and walk themselves through what thoughts and feelings may be connected to this that is disrupting our performance at school or our relationships with others. The Allard Student Wellbeing Counsellor encourages students to review unhelpful ways of thinking and challenge these thoughts.

Step 1: Identify the Situation

Describe the situation that is causing stress or triggering your emotions.

Step 2: Analyze Your Feelings

Describe sensations in your body and reference the Feelings Wheel to label the emotions.

Step 3: Identify Automatic Thoughts

Make a list of your automatic thoughts in response to the situation.

Bonus: point out which thoughts can be connected to unhelpful thinking traps [eg. all or nothing thinking, "should" statements... etc.]

Step 4: Find Objective Evidence

Write down any evidence you can find that supports the automatic thoughts and any evidence that contradicts the thoughts. Write down possible helpful thoughts in replacement.

Step 5: Check In With Yourself

Take a moment to check in with yourself. Do you feel better about the situation? Is there any action you need to take? Write down your present feelings, along with any further steps that you need to take [eg. possible coping tools or problem solving actions].

SOLVING A PROBLEM

When we are feeling emotions, sometimes we need to hold space and validate how we are feeling, while other times we are faced with emotions that come with challenging situations that need to be solved. This worksheet creates space for you to dig deeper in solving your problem.

Reminder: we are not able to think logically if are emotions are flooding our brain and body. Take time to regulate yourself before walking through this worksheet.

Define your problem

Brainstorm 3-4 solutions for your problem

Weigh the strengths and weakness to each solution

Build a plan to implement the solution you feel most comfortable with and a plan for coping if emotions arise

Take time to debrief.
If you had the chance to solve this problem again, would you choose the same solution?

DISCOVER CORE VALUES

Values are personal beliefs and priorities that serve to guide human behaviour. Acceptance and Commitment Therapy is a type of therapy that asks us to reflect on our core values as an individual and see if we are making choices and setting goals inline with those values. Often wellbeing distress can come from living and acting outside of our core values.

Exploring and identifying our core values acts as a compass when it comes to making decisions, regulating our emotions, and building relationships with others. When exploring our values, it can be helpful to go based off of a list such as [Brene Brown's list of values] or to take time to reflect on things that make you feel good, what others admire about you, and what you admire in others. Additionally, it can be helpful to reflect on specific qualities you like or standards of behaviour that you have.

Step 1: Explore & Identify Your Values

Use this space to answer some of the exploration questions above and highlight 3 values that would be at your core.

Step 2: Identify Behaviours That Support Your Values

How do you walk the talk? Take some time to acknowledge the actions you take that line up with what is important to you and what you believe in. It might also be helpful to acknowledge if you are currently acting in ways that are outside of your values.

GOAL SETTING IN YOUR DIMENSIONS OF WELLBEING

It is important to acknowledge our core values and check in on how we are doing in each dimension of wellbeing. The next two worksheets will focus on rating where you are right now in each dimension and build your own plan to create more balance in your life.

As a student, there are times in the year where building balance may feel incredibly difficult and it is important to acknowledge your capacity and set realistic goals.
